

Abstract

In a configuration where it is judged whether or not a misfire occurred, based on the comparison between diagnosis data indicating a variation of an engine rotation speed and a threshold based on engine operating conditions, the misfire judgment is canceled based on a result of the comparison between data indicating an average correlation between the diagnosis data and the threshold, and a threshold for cancellation judgment.